A component fund of the

BACKGROUND:

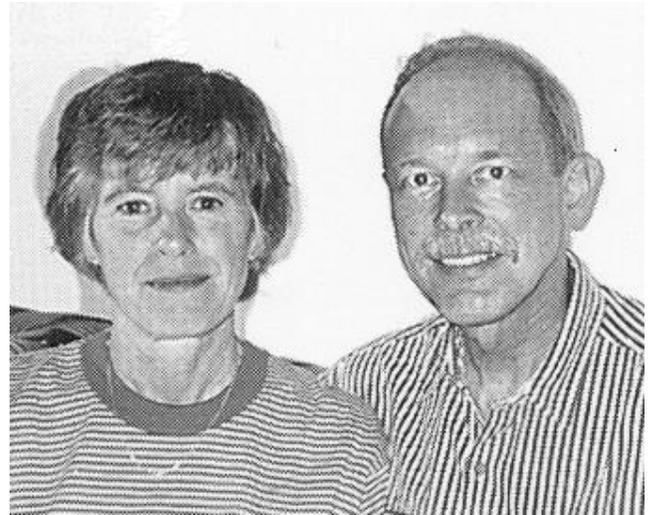

To describe Don Drown let us look at the words of Teddy Roosevelt:

“Character in the long run is the decisive factor in the life of an individual.”

It is that essence of character that the patient, soft-spoken Drown gave to his teaching profession. With his wit and intellect, he made a meaningful impression on the lives of his students and colleagues.

He taught with his wife, Arzelee, who brought to the classroom the “passion” for learning and life that she sought to instill in her students.

Both genuinely committed themselves to their profession and valued the integrity of the many young people who sat in their classrooms.

Arzelee and Don Drown

Don and Arzelee traveled in England, extensively in Canada, and the United States, always keeping in mind what they could bring back to enrich the lives of their students, whether it be a reminiscence of a conversation with Crow Indian Chief Littelight, or a visit to the British War Museum, or a walk on Hampstead Heath.

Don earned his Bachelor of Science Degree in Education and his Master of Science Degree in History and Social Studies from the University of Wisconsin, Madison and Stevens Point.

Arzelee graduated from the University of Wisconsin Eau Claire with a Bachelor of Science Degree in English, History, and Library Science, then earned her Master of Arts Degree from the University of Minnesota.
