Walter "Coke" Fehl not only promoted hockey in Wausau through his coaching, but also by the fine example he portrayed both on and off the ice. He's probably most known for his involvement with the Wausau Cyclones, a senior team he founded in 1972.

With the Cyclones, he coached and managed approximately 200 players in his 15-year career. In the early years with the Cyclones, Coke could be found flooding the rink, finding players, scheduling, transporting players to away games, and often funding the team out of his own pocket.

Coke played competitive hockey from 1954-57 and served on the reorganized youth hockey board in Wausau in the 1960s. Few will forget his untiring efforts to keep hockey alive in the Wausau area during the 1950s and 1960s.

Besides Coke's involvement with the Cyclones in the 1970s, he also was an inspiration to the Wausau Youth Hockey Program as a referee, fundraiser, sponsor, board member, organizer and scheduler. As a result, hundreds of youngsters experienced all the thrills as well as the lessons of this great sport.
